TEXTBLÖCKE UND TEXT IM ALLGEMEINEN DUNKELGRAU, TEXTART WIE HIER (ROBOTO BEI CANVA)

NADAtāx upcycling is a one-woman label based in Berlin-Moabit. What began with a single tarpaulin she couldn't bring herself to throw away has grown into a practice of careful making and thoughtful reuse. From that first piece, a series of backpacks was born – each one shaped by hand, each a response to the question: what can this become?

Those first backpacks designs found their homes at Vintage Safari in Nuremberg, and since then a quiet journey has unfolded: new bag styles sold through Vintage Safari, Frau Wunderwald in Berlin and House of Orange in Dresden, and directly via Instagram. Alongside everyday bags, NADAtāx occasionally makes costumes for theatre productions, each garment grounded in the same ethos of reuse and imagination.

Central to everything NADAtāx does is a simple idea: materials that have lived once can be given a new life – without erasing their history. Instead of new textiles, she works with what already exists, letting texture, wear, and character guide each piece. This approach acknowledges the value in what others might overlook, and challenges the cycle of waste that defines so much of contemporary fashion.

NADAtāx doesn't follow trends. It makes what feels necessary – quietly, sustainably, and with close attention to both material and maker.

If your bag breaks within one year and you can no longer carry it, I will try to repair it. This is free of charge for you. This does not apply if it is obvious that the bag has torn/broken due to destructive handling.

After one year, I will have to charge an additional fee in the event of a repair, as this is not included in my prices.

Everything I sell is handmade and the prices reflect that. I cannot, nor want to, compete with fast fashion prices. That being said I hope the love that goes into every stitch is recognisable, and this care in creation is reflected in the care with which each item is kept.

materials

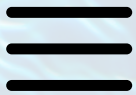

80% of the materials are second-hand. This means that there may already be signs of use. The tarpaulins I use are not comparable with the "Freitag" tarpaulins as mine are thinner. I try to choose all materials carefully, but I can't always predict the durability/quality with constant use.

return policy

Due to the nature of these items being 1 of 1, handmade pieces, returns will not be accepted unless there is a mistake on my end. Before making an inquiry about a bag, please make up your mind that you want to buy the product, even if you don't know 100% what it will look like beforehand. Every bag is unique and no two are the same.

production

All designs are created by me and the production takes place in my small studio area in my room. I have never studied fashion design and I am not a seamstress, so please bear this in mind when you buy something from me.
